Hannah Berghol is a dedicated attorney who combines detail-oriented analysis with a positive, collaborative approach to provide clients with clear, actionable guidance in insurance defense matters.

Hannah represents clients in a variety of insurance defense matters, from analyzing claims to preparing thorough, strategic motions that address complex issues like fraud and priority disputes. Her strong academic foundation in political science from Michigan State University, along with her J.D. from Wayne State University, prepared her to skillfully manage detailed case analyses and craft persuasive arguments that align with her clients' objectives. Working with Zausmer's experienced team, Hannah brings a fresh perspective and dedication to each case.

Known for her commitment to learning and building strong professional relationships, Hannah eagerly engages with mentors and colleagues to deepen her knowledge and refine her skills. Her early experience as a law clerk and mock trial competitor helped her develop a disciplined approach to case handling and strengthened her ability to organize complex information. Clients and colleagues value her straightforward communication style and her commitment to helping clients navigate the legal process confidently.

Beyond her work, Hannah stays active in the community, volunteering in high school and law school mock trial programs. In her free time, she enjoys exploring new restaurants, spending time with family and friends, and relaxing with her dog, Coco.
